Satara district has a long tradition. Prehistoric tools have been found in many places in Satara district i.e. Umbraj, Karad, Kashil, Koparde, Goware, Chinchner, Tembhu, Targaon, Dhamner, Mahuli, Limb and Venegaon etc. Relics remains of the Mesolithic Age have been found at the site. In the Mesolithic Age, different stone tools were used than in the Palaeolithic age. During that time small microliths were introduced. These include Hakes, Blades, Burins, Points, Scraper. It was made by striking a large stone with another stone. These small tools were used in various ways. Hunting was the main occupation of human beings during this period, these small tools were used for hunting and protection like bows and arrows and spears. During that time humans gradually began farming. But that was the beginning.

In a farm at Songaon in Jawali taluka of Satara district, Jigyasa Itihas Sanshodhan Manch, Yashwantrao Chavan College, Satara, Department of History at Pachwad have found fossil tools. This farm is situated at the bottom of the hill by the stream. The tools include small shells, leaf blades and so on. These tools are made of stone and pebbles. With their numbers noncore parts of relics, we thought there must be a factory for making tools. Other items have also been recovered. They must have been Mesolithic depending on the size of the tools. This period is considered from 5000 BC to 3000 B.C. This proves that this place is inhabited by human beings during this period. For this, Vishal Shinde from Songaon got the help of Aniket Shinde. Vikrant Mandape, Nilesh Pandit and Yogesh Chaukwale of Jidnyasa Itihas Sanshodhan Manch, Satara, Dr. Rajendra Deshmukh, Vishal Shinde of Department of History of Yashwantrao Chavan Mahavidyalaya, Pachwad were member of this team.
